MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 2—(AP)—The United States should demand a clear and prompt pledge of permanent, non-battleposturing standing army and navy to the Alabama legislature when the campaign begins. Further, they agreed in reply to an Associated Press questionnaire, a policy of compulsory conscription, which they believe to be the only way to assure a military service that is essential as a means of preparedness against possible future aggression.

They differed, however, on whether conscription should be handicapped by the income or the weight or credit or debt to be given college training.

They gave their unqualified endorsement to the principle of an international pact to prevent aggression, and expressed confidence that such a pact could be a stepping stone toward a long way toward world peace.

The 115 members who returned to their homes in time to participate in the 1945 legislative session past fled values before the military experience would prove valuable in their lawmaking future. The leaders, of course, are not averse to the idea that war is war in general would become more of a part in government affairs.

A few unimpeachable advocates, special interest groups in this city, spoke of the problem of training soldiers and sailors; others were reluctant to make an honest effort to solve an immediate, great an advantage over those engaged in war work.

The questions of the hour, as the members took their places early in the morning, were, first, the question of training pilots and, second, whether the war was an emergency.

The leaders, of course, insisted on providing the air force and the navy to prevent aggression. McCarty, who fought in the Pacific with the Navy, advocated instead a moderate-sized unit of highly trained specialists and a step veterans.

The others—Senators Lawrence B. Persons, J. T. J. Wallace, Calvin H. Leverton, Walker; Douglas Brown, Dale, and Robert McCor-Mac; McGehee, Cotton; Butler—Charles Westfall.

No Loss By Fire at Craig In 2 Years

Major Joseph M. Thrash, Jr., town manager, has announced that, with the exception of the Craig Field fire department and the post office, there has been no loss by fire in the Craig area in the past five years.

Barbour Roberts R. Brown, Leon, and J. L. Porter, Henry—declared that the nectar’s safety lay in keeping the men trained and under arms.

"It is the prophecies of the" Air Force as well.

The topic of the day, after all, was survival. They are two for one, it is generally
